Introduction

Welcome to the Law Society Charity Booklet 2021/22! My name is Charlotte McBride, and I am Charities Officer for the Law Society this year.

What is this booklet for?

The aim of this booklet is to showcase the opportunities to work with charities both at university, but also after you have graduated. It is by no means exhaustive, but I hope it gives you an idea of what there is to offer!

First, this booklet provides information on volunteering opportunities both in and outside of the university. Volunteering is a great way to improve to your CV as it showcases a number of transferable skills. Also, by volunteering you can meet new people and spend your time working on worthy causes.

This booklet also provides examples of possible opportunities to have a career in charity work. This includes law firms with expertise in the charity sector, working within charities themselves, or creating your own charity fellowship.

Contact Details:

If you have any further questions after reading this booklet feel free to email lawsociety@nottingham.ac.uk.

Section A: Legal Volunteering in Nottingham

Pro Bono Society

Website: <https://www.uonprobono.co.uk>.

The Pro Bono Society is made up of nine charitable projects.

Educational Projects

Aspire: Aspire conducts interactive workshops to introduce the concepts of human rights, justice, stereotyping and voting and elections to children in primary schools all over Nottingham.

OutLAW: OutLAW volunteers deliver a variety of workshops that help students in applying to university, gaining employability skills and give them an insight into the legal career.

Penal Reform

Unbarred: This project involves going into a variety of different prisons to conduct workshops for inmates who are soon to be released.

The Howard League: The Howard League for Penal Reform is a national organisation concerned with the state of prisons in the UK. The UoN Howard league continues their national work on campus by organising talks from speakers.

Amicus: Amicus is an organisation based in the USA which campaigns for the abolition of the death penalty and handles cases, pro bono, for individuals on death row. The organisation also provides real legal experience to volunteers by handling casework relating to death penalty cases.

Community:

Access 2 Justice: A2J aim to use technology and communication platforms to enable members of the community to know about their rights. A2J are currently developing an app to help students with housing issues.

Junior Lawyers Against Poverty: JLAP works with Oxfam to raise awareness of the standard of justice in other countries and how we can improve standards.

StreetLAW: StreetLAW is a multi-faceted project.

- APPEAL: APPEAL students have the opportunity to be work on miscarriage of justice cases under the supervision of the legal team at APPEAL.

- Citizens Advice Bureau: Citizens Advice service's work involves providing advice on issues such as debt management and welfare benefits, housing, immigration and asylum, employment, consumer complaints and landlord-tenant disputes.

- inFrinGeMent: inFrinGeMent is a charity organisation that aims to raise awareness of female genital mutilation. Volunteers will create age-appropriate and sensitive presentations to deliver at schools.

- Support Through Court: STC offers students the opportunity to provide practical and emotional support to litigants in person in major civil and family court centres in England and Wales.

Legal Advice Clinic: A new project, the Clinic is a work in progress and are looking into providing advice on topics such as housing.

Training contract? In Charity?

The Legal Education Foundation

(TLEF) Justice First Fellowship:

What is the TLEF Justice First Fellowship?

'TLEF focuses on the essential role of legal education in helping people and organisations to understand and use the law as a tool for change. Too often people across the UK are unable to get support and expertise that may be needed for them to access justice. The Foundation recognised that in order to ensure the law is there for everyone who needs it, communities must have talented and committed social welfare lawyers'

The TLEF Justice First Fellowship aims to support this next generation of social welfare lawyers by sponsoring them through their training contracts.

To July 2021, the fellowship has supported 7 cohorts, 7 barristers and 103 new social justice solicitors to qualify. As a testament to the quality of Fellows and host organisations, 98% of graduated fellows are currently in paid employment with 91% working as lawyers using law for the public benefit to achieve a social good.

What does the TLEF Justice First Fellowship offer?

The fellowship provides a two-year fully funded training contract, and a free place on the Professional Skills Course at BPP campuses. During this period, Fellows spend two years working in leading UK organisations, which act as hosts and enable them to learn alongside the best in the profession.

While completing the Fellowship, Fellows also work with their host organisation to develop a project that will help advance access to justice. This is a crucial part of the scheme, helping Fellows to gain programme development experience and offering the hosts additional capacity to open up new areas of work and further meet legal needs.

2021 Hosts:

Anti Trafficking and Labour Exploitation Unit (ATLEU): a young charity providing legal representation to victims of trafficking and labour exploitation.

APPEAL: a charity and law practice that fights miscarriages of justice and demands reform.

Bhatt Murphy (with Article 39): Bhatt Murphy is a team of lawyers working together to make a contribution to the protection of civil liberties. Article 19 is a small, independent charity which fights for the rights of children living in state and privately-run institutions in England.

Bristol Law Centre: a charity providing free legal advice in specialist areas of social welfare law, and also represents clients in court.

Centre for Women's Justice: aims to bring together specialist lawyers, academics and other experts in the field of violence against women, with those working on the frontline as activists, survivors and service providers to bring strategic law challenges and ensure access to justice for victims of male violence.

Legal Path: Advising the Not-For Profit and Social Enterprise Sector:

Charities lawyers advising the not-for-profit and social enterprise sector cover a vast area of legal ground from wills and trusts to commercial and real estate law.

They can either work for a firm specialising in this area or in-house at larger charities.

Some lawyers specialise in litigation over disputed legacies; others focus on the creation and governance of registered charities and industrial and provident societies.

This type of work includes working on wills and trusts, advising on governance and managing charitable statuses and relationships with the Charity Commission. Charity lawyers often deal with enquiries regarding tax and VAT, inheritance law, data protection, contracts, mergers and takeovers, partnerships, fundraising, political activities and campaigning, trading, gaming and lotteries.

These lawyers may also deal with other areas that affect not-for-profit organisations such as employment law, dealing with land, intellectual property, financial services and media enquiries.
